All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling in the nurse's arms,
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like a snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like a furnace, with a woful ballad.
Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard;
And then the justice,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,

Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

Shakespeare
As You Like It
Act II, Sc. 7

Belleville Senior High School
Belleville, New Jersey

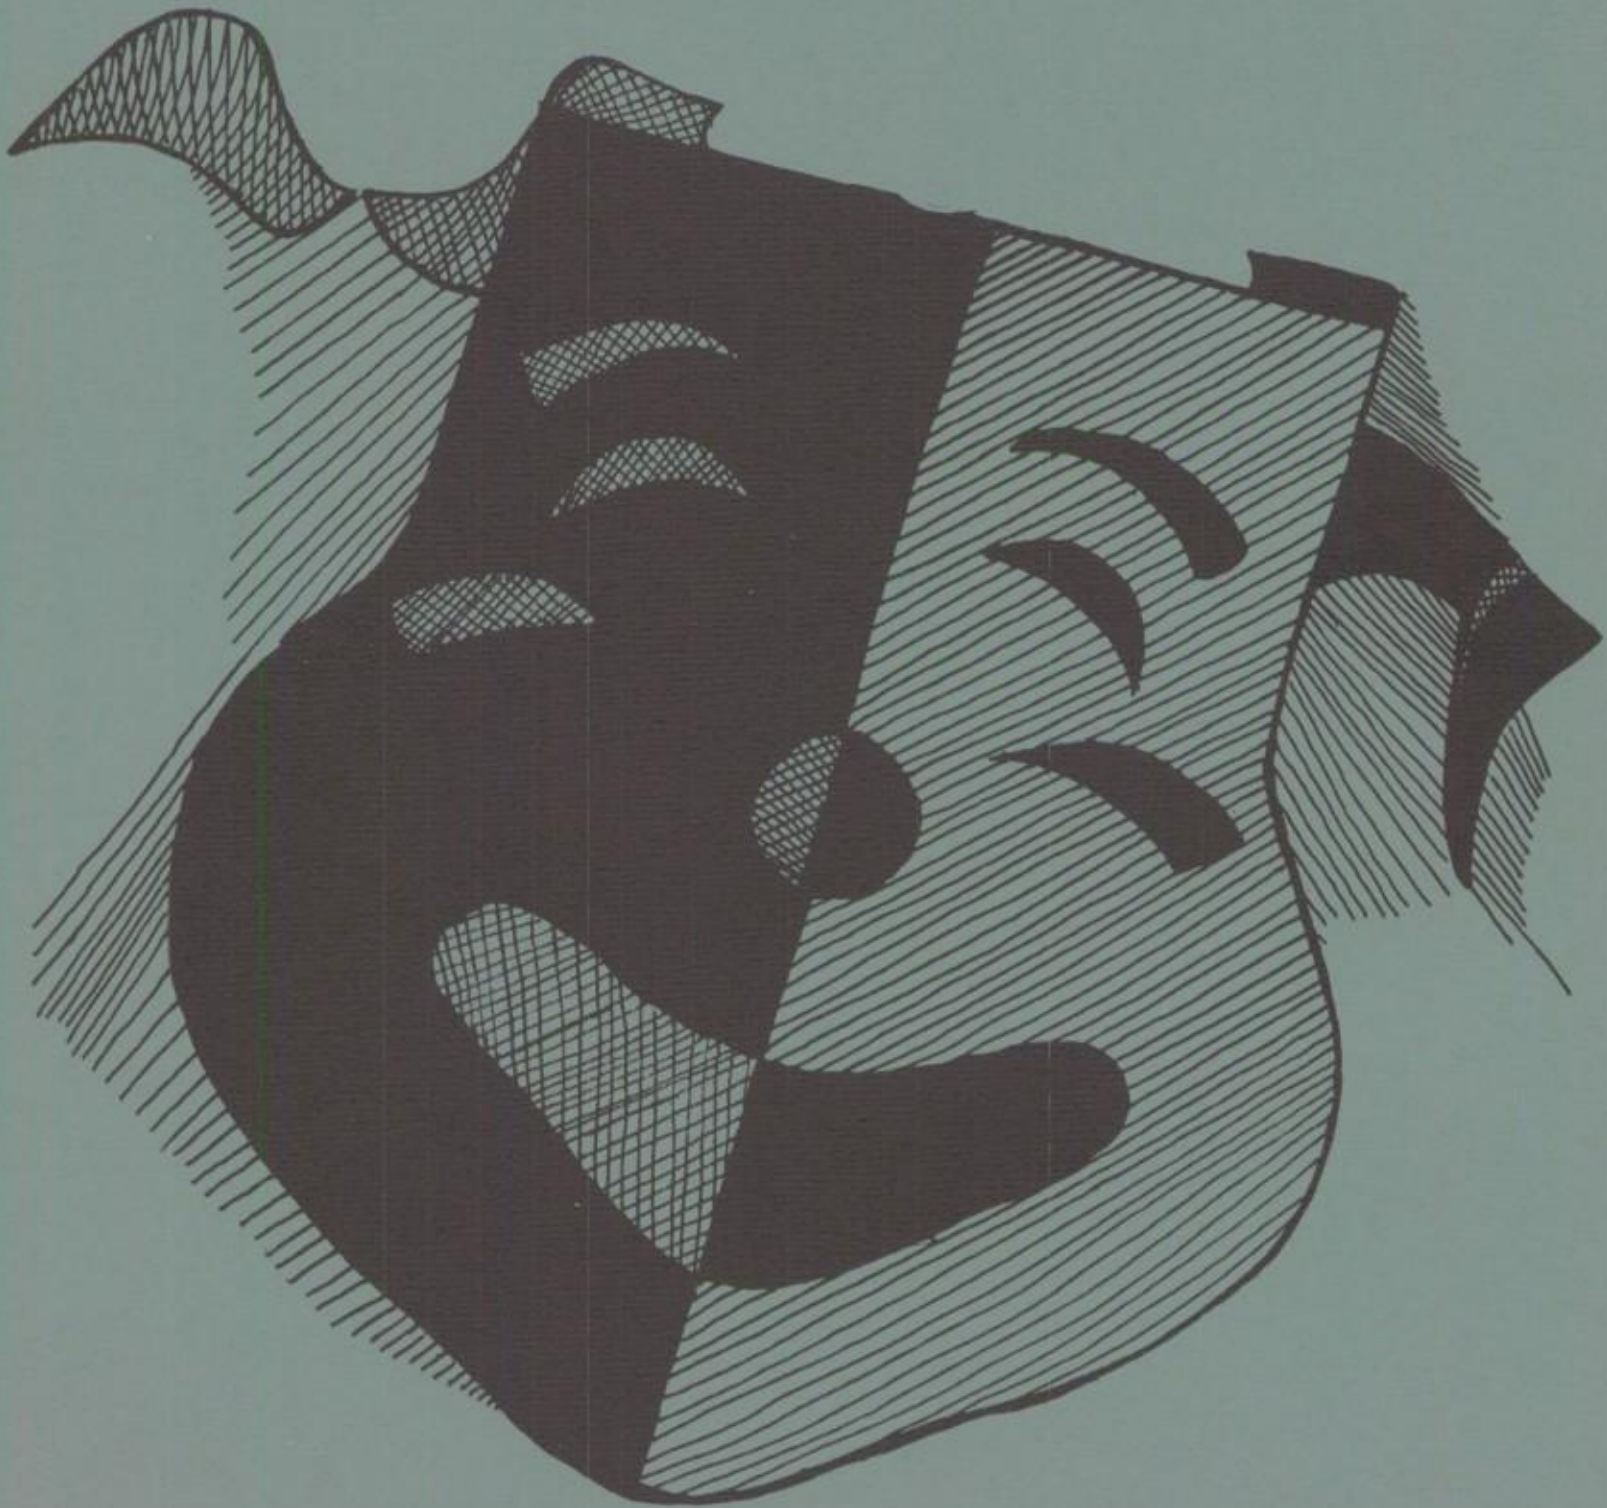

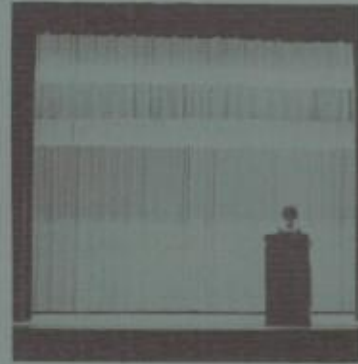

“And what’s a life? — a weary pilgrimage,
Whose glory in one day doth fill the stage.”

Where net-maskt men do play their personage.”

DuBartas

“Each player on this team — whether he shines in the spotlight of the backfield or eats dirt in the line — must be an all-American.”

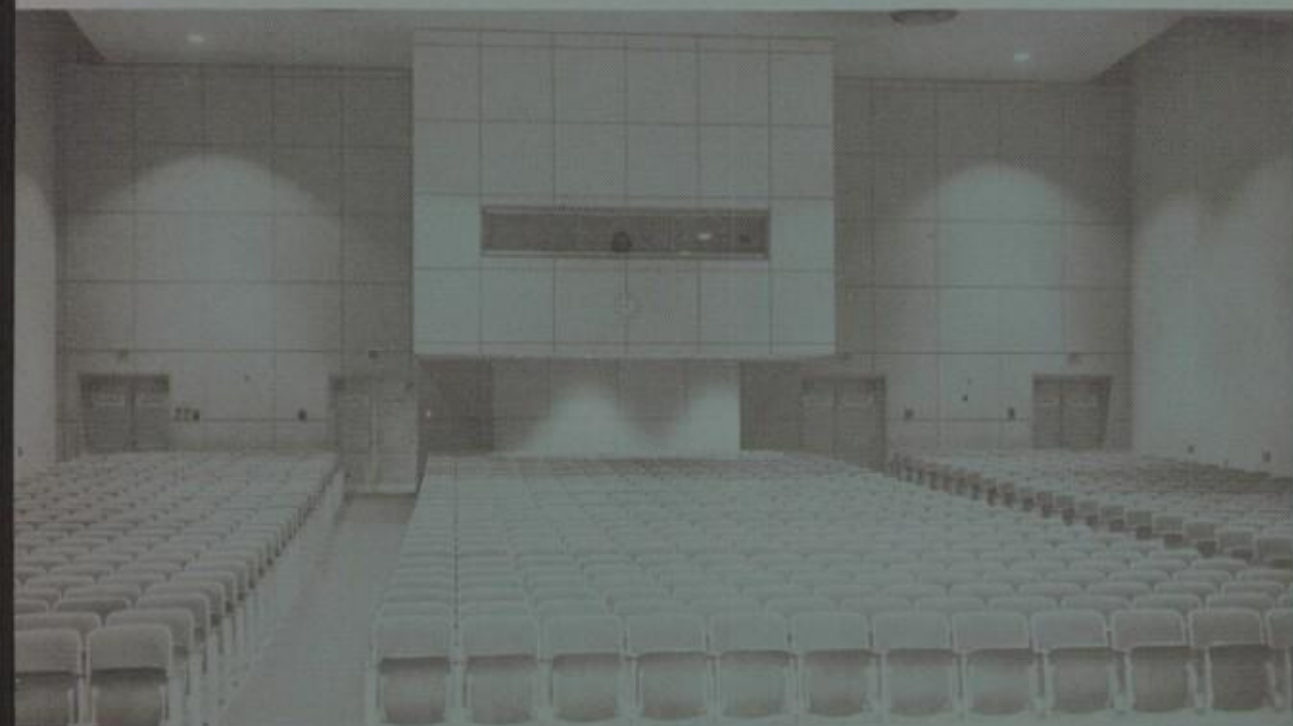

Omar Bradley

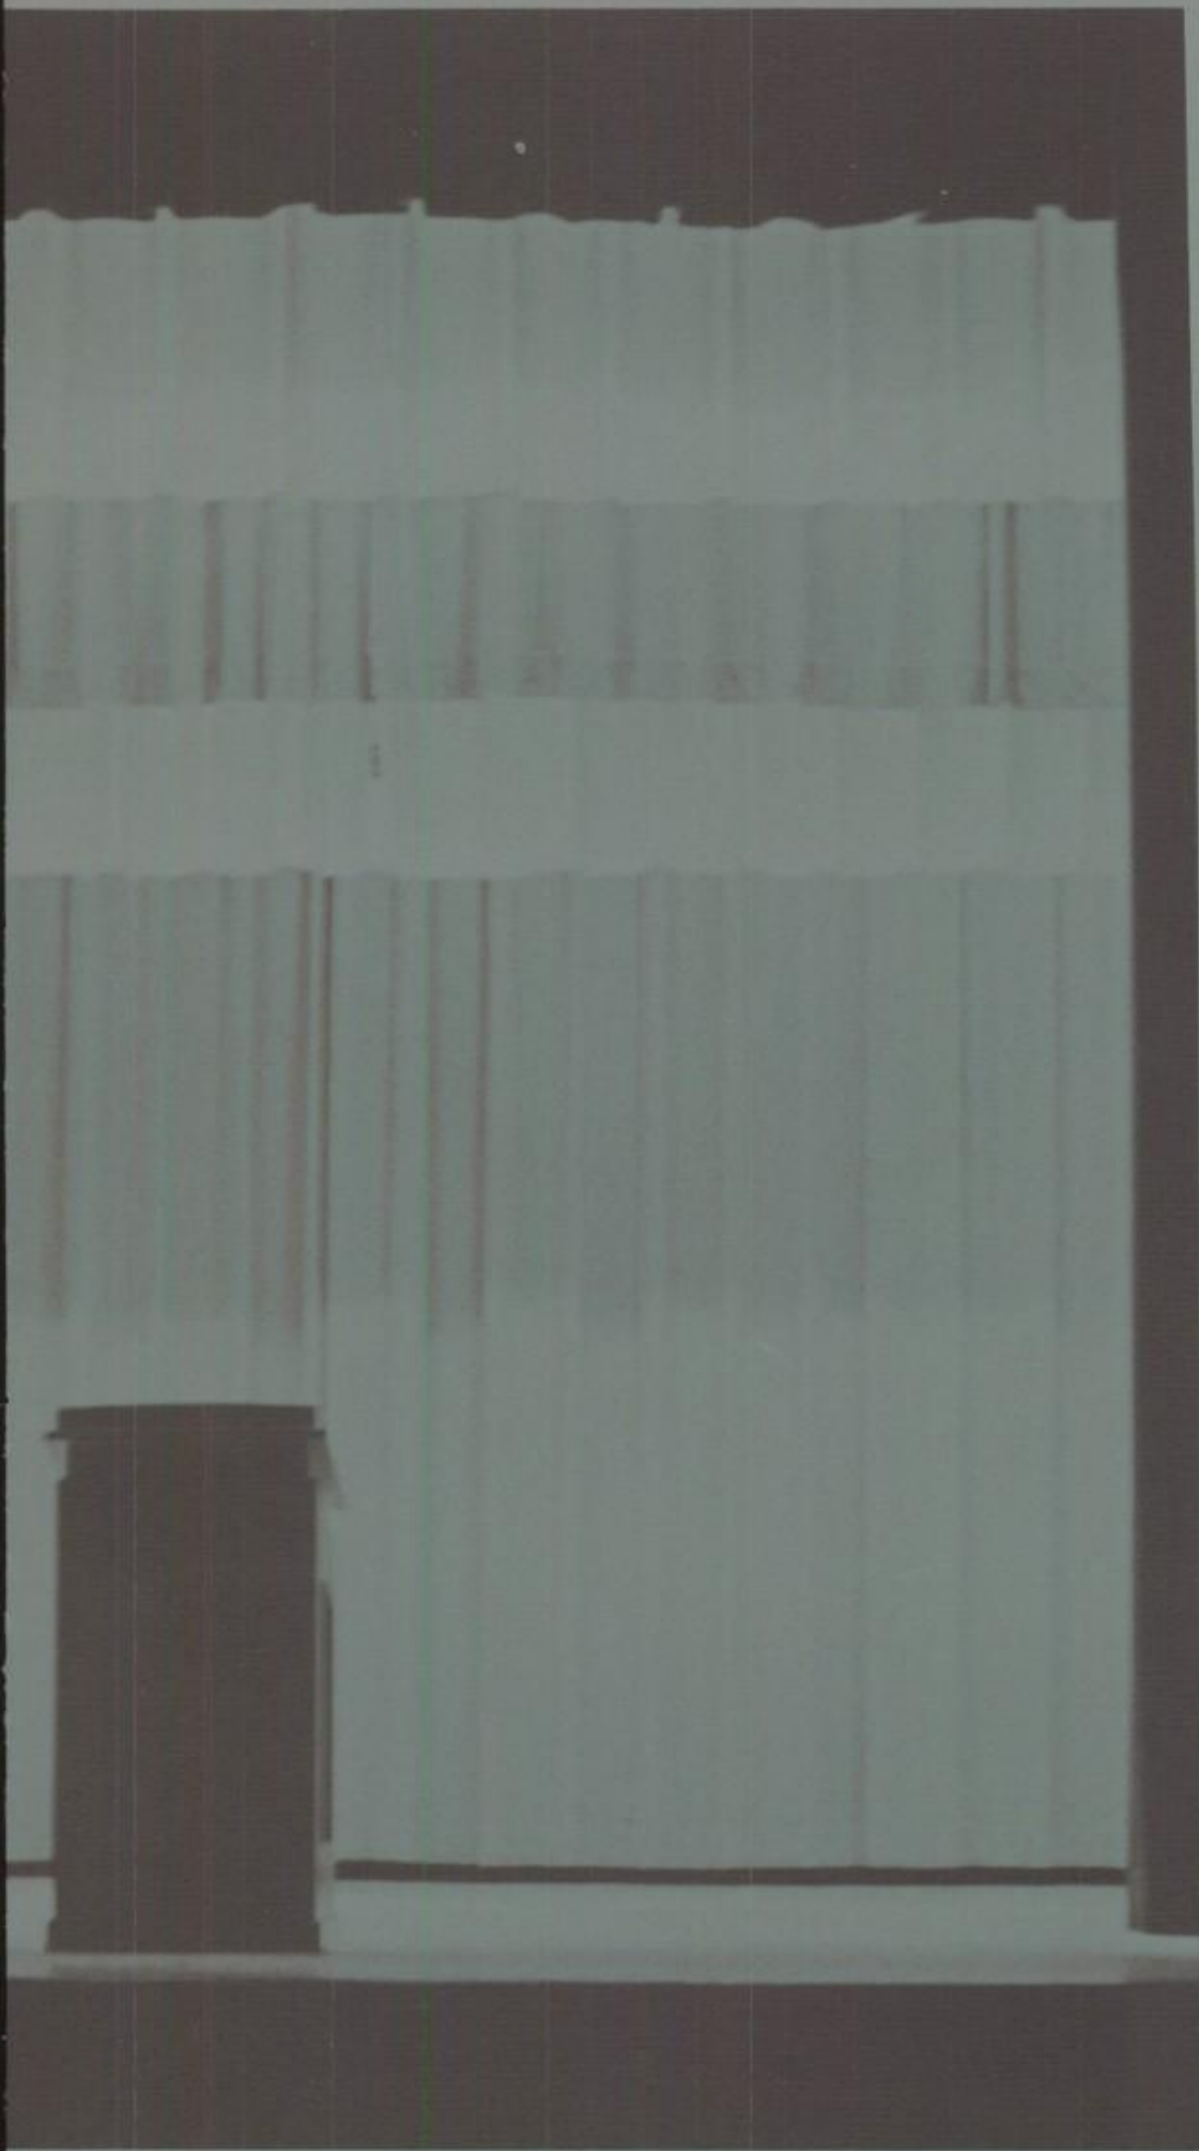

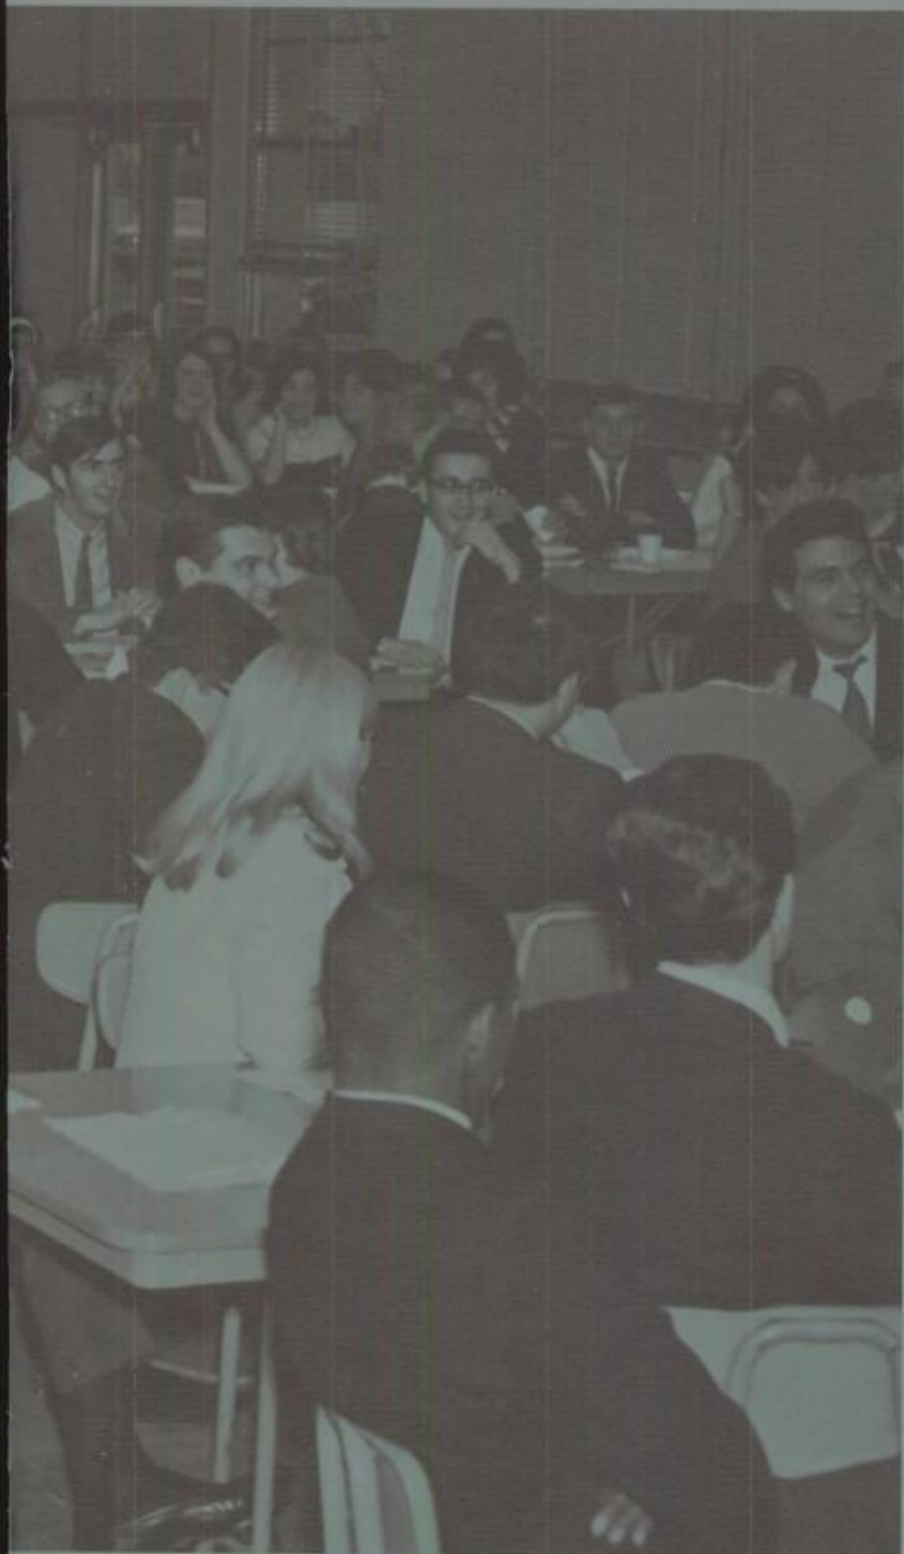

“Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks:
Plays are like supper; poets are the cooks.”

Farquhar

As many opinions as people.”

During the year, the Baker's Dozen, which numbered 42 this year, sang at community hospitals, schools in Belleville, and performed again at Christmas in the Port Authority. Dr. Samuel Peck is the conductor of this group of girls who practice three days a week before school, and Rebecca Moretti is the accompanist.

This group of male singers was started this year under the direction of Dr. Peck, and presently there are 13 members. Usually they can be found rehearsing with the Baker's Dozen, and they even performed together in a few concerts, something that was a landmark in the musical history of Belleville High School.

Belairs

Of Music

Band

This swinging group of boys is led by Mr. Robert Wing, and they perform at the beginning of most school assemblies, and this year at the band concert. Throughout the year they can be found in the music room practicing their "turned on" sound.

Last fall the band, which was under the direction of Robert A. Wing, was kept busy playing and marching at football games, and then practicing for their annual band concert, which was held at the high school. In April they will head down South to Virginia, where they will perform at the Azalea Festival in Norfolk.

WHAT EVERY BRIDE SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PHOTOGRAPHY

A Courtesy of Kondreck Photographers
For Future Brides

When your wedding is over and you're back down to earth, six months later or 50 years hence, the wedding album crammed full of sparkling, bright photographs will carry you back to those exquisite moments again and again. The wedding photographs are a magic lantern, precious and true-to-life. They let you see yourself and your husband as others saw you on the most important day of your life.

But how can you make certain that you have only beautiful photographs to remind you of the most important day of your life? With the help of The Professional Photographers of America, the oldest and largest association of professional photographers in the world, here are tips and suggestions to save you trouble and money, and help you be sure your wedding album is a treasure to cherish.

First of all, go to a professional. He'll know how to conduct himself at the sacred wedding ceremony while an amateur won't. Wedding photography is a demanding job, for good wedding pictures capture the fun and excitement from start to finish. Good photographers also take complete knowledge of the rules and regulations of the house of worship where the wedding is held. This is so important that there's a new Code of Ethics for Wedding Photography established by the PP of A for its members. Photographers who subscribe to it promise that they will:

- (1) contact the clergyman to learn the rules, customs and regulations affecting photographs in the church;
- (2) obey the rules of the church;
- (3) will work in a dignified, unobtrusive manner while making the wedding pictures;

(4) won't litter the church with trash.

The rules sound simple enough, but you'd be surprised at the amateur photographers who don't know enough to follow them. Popping flash bulbs, whirling motion picture cameras and even actual interference with the ceremony are all signs of the amateur to beware of.

You'll probably want to have a formal bridal portrait made before the wedding. Direct color, modern lighting and more casual, life-like poses will give you a chance to look like a high fashion model.

Arrange for your sitting appointment as early as possible before the wedding, usually when the gown is ready. (This gives you enough time to get the formal portrait to your newspapers.) Get to bed early the night before the sitting, for fatigue tightens the muscles around the mouth and eyes.

The hair style should complement the wedding dress and the headpiece. Ask your hairdresser to style your hair to fit the headpiece and veil, and ask him not to do anything too extreme. Before the portrait is made, comb hair ends and control them with a light spray.

Makeup is very important. A clear glowing, natural complexion is everybody's dream, but natural perfection is hard to come by. Anyway, you must use makeup on the eyes and mouth for a good photograph.

Use a shade of foundation on your face that matches your skin tone. The new, liquid base makeups work best. Because good facial highlights are essential to a fine photograph, pancake and face powder should be avoided.

If you're

tan or have a dark complexion, cover any unevenness in flesh tones to match exactly. Be sure to blend all makeup in the areas under the chin and down the neck and chest areas.

Eyes and lips should be accentuated. On the eyes, touch the eyebrows lightly with eyebrow pencil. Upper lashes should be curled and further emphasized with a light application of black mascara on upper and lower lashes. Eyeliner will further display your eyes and give them a brighter, more alive appearance. Eye shadow depends upon how deeply set your eyes are. The average bride will want to use a brown-toned eye shadow between the lash and brow, but not enough to create a sinister effect.

A slightly darker lipstick tone on the outline of your lips will emphasize your expression. The contemporary, opalescent lip colors are excellent for photography, for they create a feeling of feminine grace.

Remember to bring your wedding shoes, gloves and necklace to the studio. Because most of the modern and contemporary wedding gowns show the shoe tip in the portrait, make sure that the shoe edge matches the color of the shoe-top.

The pictures made before, during and after the ceremony are called the wedding candids. They're the ones that will fill your album.

Proper planning is important, so sit down with the photographer several days before the wedding to discuss what pictures you want to have taken. He'll have suggestions to add to your ideas, and you'll have no trouble in finding enough different poses to reflect how your wedding really was.

Most members of the clergy now appreciate how important wedding photographs are and gladly cooperate with photographers—especially if they subscribe to the Code of Ethics for Wedding Photography. The clergyman's concern is that nothing happens to take away from the dignity of the ceremony. Keep in mind that customs and what's considered right and wrong in wedding photography vary across the United States. For example, some churches today don't frown on two or three flash photographs during the processional and recessional parts of the service, while others consider any flash photographs to be in very bad taste.

However, churches which do not permit flash photographs often allow time exposures to be made, usually from the back of the church or from the side entrance to the altar. No matter where the wedding is held, the photographer should not go down the aisle for a picture.

Whether to go back to the altar for additional photographs after the service is completed depends on what you want and how the clergyman feels about it. This procedure is much more common with Protestant weddings than with Catholic or Jewish ones.

Your friends and relatives should not bring their own cameras to the ceremony. The professional photographer and his camera will be unnoticed, if not invisible, during the ceremony because he knows his place is not to interfere with the service. Guests with cameras do interfere, however, so prevent this possible source of trouble before it begins.

The costs involved with wedding photography vary with many things: location, number of poses and prints, and black and white photographs or color, to name a few. Inform yourself fully about costs by asking the photographer for an estimate or a price list before you hire him. If you've recently moved from one part of the country to another, don't be surprised if the prices are different. Costs tend to be slightly higher on the East Coast than in other parts of the United States. They're also higher in or near major cities.

You should not, of course, ever select a photographer on the basis of price alone. It doesn't make sense to let the false status of a high-priced photographer influence you if you like another, less expensive photographer's work better. But do be wary of "bargain basement" photographers who promise cut rates. The canny English essayist, John Ruskin, had a good thought about this when he said: "There is hardly anything in the world that some man cannot make a little worse and sell a little cheaper, and the people who consider price only are this man's lawful prey."

One final suggestion—be sure to have your wedding photographs mounted in a good sturdy album. They're a family treasure that you'll come back to again and again for the rest of your life.

Best Wishes

THE CLASS OF

Dear Lois,
Remember all
our great times ever since kindergarten. Although we haven't had any classes together in high school ^(university) we've still remained friends. Good Luck in all you do, I know you'll succeed in all your endeavor - ours because you've got what it takes.
God Bless You.

Love,
Nancy

Lois,

Good luck + best wishes for a successful future.

Love, Marilyn

Lois,

Much luck
and happiness in your future. I have fun at college
next year.

M. B. Ellis
